

AN OVERALL VIEW OF THE MISSOURI STATE LIBRARY

Historically the Missouri State Library has functioned vis-a-vis the public libraries of the State in a manner similar to that of the State Department of Education in relation to the public schools.

State Libraries, beyond a responsibility to provide law library services, developed from a 19th and early 20th Century idealism which sought to encourage reading in the lives of all people.

- a. public library services first began in cities.
- b. state libraries made books available to those in rural areas.

The "county library" was seen as a means to provide library services for rural populations; it also provided a broader tax base for library support than that possible in a small city or town.

From 1946 until the early 1960's the State Library conducted "demonstrations" in almost every county of the State in order to show the value of libraries and to encourage a positive vote for the creation and support of county library districts. Almost every county in the State has voted at least once on this proposition.

The State Library offered consultant services to local libraries, especially the smaller ones, on library operation and improvement. In addition to providing books to citizens without local library services, the State Library supplied books, etc. to local libraries which otherwise could not make them available. As more and more local libraries came into existence, the type of books supplied by the State in this program became more and more specialized: books which even a well-supported local library might not purchase but which might nonetheless be needed.

In 1956 federal funds became available for improving rural libraries; these funds were administered by the State Libraries.

In 1964 the federal law was amended to permit use of federal funds in all areas and to provide funds for assistance in the construction of public library buildings.

In 1969 the federal law imposed the obligation to develop library services for the disadvantaged and for the inmates of state-supported institutions and for the blind and physically handicapped.

Today the people of the State are served by the State Library by:

- a. Outreach or advisory programs.
- b. Loans of books and other materials to local libraries or to individuals without local library service.
- c. Service to State government; development of a collection of federal and State government publications.
- d. Federal and State financial grant programs.

OPERATING POLICIES AND PRINCIPLES OF THE MISSOURI STATE LIBRARY

1. The State Library continues to be oriented toward public libraries of the State. This orientation results from history, but is also the product of a need for a State agency to provide for this kind of library and also the assignment to this agency of the administration of State and Federal aid programs for public libraries.
2. The State Library has operated on the principle that public library service is essentially a local option. Although the State Library recognizes its responsibility to offer advice and encouragement to local citizens and local librarians regarding the value of public library service, the State Library has never attempted to impose library service and has conducted its programs for local libraries with a minimum of regulation or interference with local decision making.
3. The State Library has sought to convert its own programs in such a way as to supplement local library development. Specialized staff members and specialized support services are now offered to local libraries as against a more generalized kind of support in past years. The ideal has been for the State Library's services to grow more sophisticated as local library needs for service from the State Library have grown more sophisticated.
4. The State Library has retained a respect for and has promoted a continuing dedication to traditional concepts of library service---the value of books and reading in the lives of people. The State Library has been interested in and has supported experiments in improving library service if these ventures seem to make traditional library services more useful to people.

PUBLIC LIBRARY DEVELOPMENT IN MISSOURI

Public libraries in Missouri are locally operated by lay boards appointed from the citizens of the districts. The availability of library service and its quality rests with the local citizens.

The map of Missouri gives a picture of the public library development to date. Approximately 89% of the population of Missouri is served by a local tax supported public library.

At least 62% of the population is served by the seven largest libraries-- each of which serves over 100,000 population. It is often felt that a public library must serve a population of at least 100,000 to have the local tax base to support the broad range of services necessary to meet the library needs of its citizens. This has been accomplished in some of Missouri's less populated areas through the multi-county or regional library organizations.

The map indicates that the 11% of the population (545,308) without library services are located in thirty-six scattered counties of the State. Citizens in twelve counties of the State have access to no locally supported library service.

The document headed Library Service in Missouri lists by county the current public library development.

EXTERNAL RELATIONSHIPS WITH LIBRARIES IN THE STATE

Recognizing the autonomy of local public libraries, the philosophy at the State level has been to see the personnel in libraries in the State as colleagues with whom the State Library staff can work in sharing ideas, information and plans. This has included personnel in all kinds of libraries. However, because of various circumstances the greatest amount of contact has been with public libraries.

Each program at the State level represents special expertise that is available to libraries, individual staff members, library trustees, administrators and citizens. In addition to individual contacts, this includes availability for workshops, both statewide and areawide, as well as attendance at meetings directly and indirectly related to library concerns.

INTERNAL RELATIONSHIPS OF STATE LIBRARY PROGRAMS

The organization chart is included in the Organization Manual which was previously distributed to the Board. Some slight changes have been made in the one in the present packet.

The organization chart indicates eight programs which are performed within the structure. The coordinators of these programs work together to plan, carry out, and evaluate the individual programs in such a way that the programs are related and compliment each other in accomplishing the overall goals of assisting and supporting libraries and citizens in meeting the library needs of the State.

Each program represents both external and internal activities available to the citizens of the State.

The coordination of these programs is accomplished through the Associate State Librarian who meets regularly with a committee composed of the eight coordinators and a representation of the Staff Association. The Associate State Librarian holds individual conferences with the coordinators and receives and distributes regularly reports of the activities of the various programs.

PUBLICATIONS PROGRAM

The purpose of this program is to share ideas and information with the library community and others who are interested. Show-Me Libraries is the monthly publication which is now received regularly by the Board. Other regular publications include the annual report, Directory of Missouri Libraries: Public, College and University Libraries, as well as bi-monthly information on special areas of interest to the library community.

CHILDREN'S SERVICES

This program is centered in the Children's Book Examination Center which houses samples of current books deposited free by the publishers, a special selected collection of materials for children and for those who work with children, and display collections of award winning children's books.

A Children's Book Selection Committee representing librarians working with children in both public and school libraries from throughout the State meets regularly to evaluate new books and to share materials and ideas.

The Children's Services Program is available to anyone in the State who is working with groups of children.

DEVELOPMENT OF SPECIAL LIBRARY SERVICES

This program was formerly the Institutional Library Program but has been expanded to include not only work with institutions developing library services for their clientele but also to work with libraries developing services to certain groups such as those persons who have been institutionalized but have returned to the community, as well as the blind, the physically handicapped and the homebound.

This program includes a grant program under the Library Services and Construction Act which will be included in a later discussion.

LIBRARY RESOURCES

Earlier this represented two programs -- Professional Materials and Library Manpower -- which have now been combined into one office under a single coordinator.

The Professional Materials Program includes building a collection which relates to professional problems facing librarians in various kinds of libraries as well as library trustees, citizens, and school, college and university administrators.

In addition to building the collection, an effort is made to call attention to the availability of the materials and to pertinent information through publications, displays and participation with various groups throughout the State.

The area of the program related to library personnel includes a placement service which attempts to put employers in touch with persons seeking positions and potential employees in touch with library positions which are open.

This program has also included a Scholarship Program, an Internship Program and a Fellowship Program. All have been funded with Federal Library Services and Construction Act money which will be discussed later.

The coordinator of this program works closely with the Library Education and Manpower Committee of the Missouri Library Association in recruiting to the profession and in library personnel development.

Both phases of the Library Resources Program are coordinated as closely as possible with the University of Missouri School of Library and Information Science.

AN OVERVIEW OF THE DIVISIONS OF REFERENCE AND LOAN, ACQUISITIONS AND TECHNICAL SERVICES, AND
CENTRAL SERVICES AT THE MISSOURI STATE LIBRARY

The Reference and Loan Division, the Acquisitions and Technical Services Division, and the Central Services Division of the State Library are those units of the Library responsible for supplying the traditional library services of reference information, interlibrary loan, collection building, circulation, and maintenance of the collection. Other units share, however, in some functions and this will become clear as the specific programs of service aimed at state government are detailed.

The day-to-day operations and responsibilities of these three divisions are highly interrelated and integrated toward achieving the service goals of the State Library vis-a-vis the general public and the state's libraries. These goals might be stated as follows: (1) to supply specialized services to local libraries in Missouri, services they are unable to provide locally, (2) and to acquire, organize, use and make available library materials which supplement the efforts of local libraries to serve the information needs of the people.

In order to supply the specialized books and information mentioned above, and to turn the State Library toward its goals of becoming the more "sophisticated" facility outlined in the operating policies, a realistic and fully implemented materials selection policy must be in effect. The document, Selection and Acquisitions: Policies and Principles, January, 1974, sets forth the guidelines which are being used to build a specialized collection supporting the present overall aims of the State Library.

Selection of library materials at the State Library is a function cutting across all divisional lines and one involving the participation of all professional librarians as well as some support staff. The enormous effort of reviewing and selecting materials for the collection is co-ordinated, however, by the Division of Acquisitions and Technical Services. In addition, they perform the actual ordering and accessioning of all purchases. Some idea of the year's activities by that staff as regards acquisitions and other technical services can be gained by examination of the summary sheet entitled, "State Library Holdings, July 1, 1974."

The State Library utilizes the services of the local Library Service Center for most cataloging and actual physical preparation of new books. This allows the Library to have a smaller staff engaged in this activity than would normally be found in a library of this size. However, much original and time-consuming cataloging is necessary because of the nature of many materials purchased by the State Library.

In summary, the Division of Acquisitions and Technical Services is engaged in the activities related to orders and receipt of books, adding copies and other non-book materials, co-ordinating selection, maintaining the periodical and serials check-in, preparing and handling interlibrary book exchange, invoices and book purchasing, cataloging (original and revision), decisions on lost books, and card catalog and shelf-list maintenance.

The distinguishing feature of the Division of Reference and Loan is its direct relationship to the Library's patrons and clientele. As mentioned before, high priority is given to the area of information and loan services to the general public through the state's libraries. The division uses a number of means for interlibrary contact--mail service, TWX, and telephone, as well as personal contact and visitations to reach the libraries of the state. The answering of subject requests and the locating of specific books for the patrons of 200 library units in Missouri is the major function of this division.

The State Library is the clearinghouse or hub of an information network involving public, academic, and institutional libraries. When we speak of "interlibrary loan" it is in the broad sense of the sharing of total library resources, be they books, periodicals, journal articles, information services, microforms, or bibliographic exchange. To accomplish this transfer of information, an interlibrary network linking the State Library to six large metropolitan resource libraries has been established. The nature of the material transmitted ranges from simple to complex, ephemeral to fundamental, from indispensable to trifling. Our divisional policy, however, is to respect each request and work toward filling it to the best of our ability regardless of our own impressions as to its worth. The Reference and Loan Division staff is required to demonstrate daily its effectiveness in techniques of interlibrary loan, specialized and general subject and informational searches, bibliographic assistance, and referral skills.

The Reference and Loan Division, along with other library units, has attempted over the years to develop means to measure the effectiveness of our reference and loan activities. A computer analysis of the work has been conducted for several years. Correspondence with other state library agencies indicates that Missouri's analysis of the interlibrary loan process on a statewide basis is far ahead of what most states have developed. User surveys have been and continue to be conducted on a regular basis. Statistics have been collected on informational activities and are used in evaluation, policy decisions, reports, and for assistance in budget preparation.

The Reference and Loan Division continues to offer library services to that portion of Missouri's citizens living in areas of the state unserved by local library units--at present about 11%.

The Division of Central Services is responsible for a wide range of activities among them circulation of the book collection, overdue notices, billing for lost books, assistance in checking the State Library collection for loan purposes, maintenance of stacks and the physical equipment of the library, inventory and supplies for all divisions, and printing of in-house publications and materials. Needless to say, all of these activities are basic to the satisfactory accomplishment of the library's service goals.

LIBRARY SERVICE TO GOVERNMENT

Information is vital to effective state government. The Missouri State Library, through its reference and research services, strives to provide unbiased, accurate, timely information to all three branches of state government. The Reference Librarian responsible for government services works with state agencies and legislators to encourage the use of services offered by the State Library. The entire reference, interlibrary loan, and government documents staff participate in answering their requests. During January-June 1974 the State Library received approximately 1083 requests from state government, of which 235 were from the General Assembly.

In serving state government, the State Library staff works closely with the Legislative Reference Library in the Capitol, which refers many requests for information to the State Library. The staff also works with the Supreme Court Library, which has traditionally served as the law library for the State of Missouri. The State Library utilizes the statewide interlibrary loan network in meeting the needs of state government and also calls upon specialized sources, such as the technical collection at Linda Hall Library in Kansas City.

In addition to reference services, special services "performed for state government include:

- (1) "Information 70", a bi-monthly list which highlights new materials in subject areas of interest to state government;
- (2) Bibliographies on topics of current interest;
- (3) A daily compilation of newspaper clippings covering legislative news;
- (4) Packets of articles on important legislative issues for legislators;
- (5) Assistance to state agencies in organizing their small office libraries;
- (6) Routing specified materials regularly to state agency personnel;
- (7) A collection of current interest materials from organizations such as the Council of State Governments.

The State Library also assists Missouri public libraries in providing library service to the local public officials in their communities. The State Library staff and collection serve as a backup for local government requests requiring specialized material. The hotline reference service has frequently made these materials available in a very short time to local officials needing information immediately. A special service to local government is the bi-monthly "Information for Local Officials" list. Local officials may borrow publications on the list, which are selected for their special interests.

THE GOVERNMENT DOCUMENTS PROGRAM

Reference services to neither state government nor public library patrons could be carried out effectively without a program of collecting and utilizing publications of the state and Federal governments. Government publications offer an inexpensive source of information on a wide range of topics and often provide the only source for data essential to state agency planning and research. Government documents range from material on popular subjects, such as health and consumer interests, to statistical data, reports on government-sponsored research, reports of activities, programs, and regulations of government agencies, and publications relating to Congressional and state legislation.

Federal Documents

The Missouri State Library receives most of its Federal government publications through the documents depository program described in "The Federal Documents Depository System" (see following sheet.) Documents not available through the depository program are ordered from government agencies and sales sources. Several important reference sources published privately aid in keeping up with Federal legislation.

In addition to its activities in acquiring and providing access to Federal documents, the Documents Division is active in statewide activities aimed at promoting the use of the publications of the Federal government by the citizens of Missouri. Among these are: Articles on documents in Show-Me Libraries; bibliographies of documents on various topics; workshops with public librarians to acquaint them with documents resources; work with the Missouri Library Association Government Documents Committee on such projects as gathering information statewide on libraries' loan policies for documents and training on documents for librarians in all types of libraries.

Missouri State Documents

The Missouri State Library has the most complete current collection of state government publications in the state. A collection of older state documents is maintained in the State Archives. Since Missouri has no state documents depository legislation, state documents must be obtained through cooperation and constant contacts with state agencies. A checklist of all state documents received at the State Library is published bi-monthly and circulated widely to school, academic, special, and public libraries, state agencies, legislators, and interested individuals. At present it is the sole source for regular information on the publications of a number of agencies. The State Library's documents staff has recently been enlarged to allow greater development of its program of information on the activities and publications of state agencies.

Documents of Other States

The State Library collects in a more limited way the publications of other states' government agencies. These provide valuable information to legislators and state agencies for comparing programs and policies of other states. The State Library receives the majority of its out-of-state documents through membership in an Interstate Legislative Exchange operated through the Council of State Governments; others are obtained directly from state government agencies.

THE FEDERAL DOCUMENTS DEPOSITORY SYSTEM

Over 1,100 libraries in the United States are designated as Federal documents depositories. A depository library receives automatically, free of charge, one copy each of selected classes of government publications. In return, it is required to make the publications available to the public and to retain them permanently, unless a regional library serves the state. A regional depository library receives all publications available through the depository system, makes them available for interlibrary loan, and keeps them permanently. Other depositories in the state can weed their older documents by offering them for exchange through the regional depository. At present there are 36 regional depositories in the U.S., but Missouri has none.

More than 3,000 classes of publications are presently available for choice by depository libraries. During the first six months of 1974, the Missouri State Library received approximately 64% of the documents made available through the depository system.

Total number available	4,392
Received by MOSL	2,832

(These totals exclude the large number of Congressional bills and committee reports, which MOSL receives.)

While some depository designations may be automatically obtained -- by the state library and by the highest appellate court library, for example -- the majority, according to law, have been ~~and are~~ determined by U.S. Senators and Representatives. Two Representative designations per Congressional district and two designations per Senator are allowed. These designations are permanent and do not change with the officeholder. Currently Missouri has four Representative vacancies for depositories and no Senatorial vacancies.

STATE AID TO PUBLIC LIBRARIES

The total annual amount of State Aid to Public Libraries is dependent on the appropriations of the Missouri General Assembly.

The distribution of State Aid to Public Libraries is set by law in Section 181.060 of Missouri Revised Statutes, 1969.

Provisions are made for a portion of the appropriations to be used for establishment grants to county libraries. With present library development this is a less frequent grant. The last grant was in fiscal year '74 at the rate of twenty-five cents per capita. This is a one-time grant.

Provisions are also made for equalization grants to county libraries. With present dollar values this portion of the law is no longer realistic since it is based on a yield of less than one dollar per capita from a one mill tax levy. The only county now receiving equalization is Pulaski County which includes the population of Ft. Leonard Wood. This has been made at the rate of 4.39 cents per capita (based on amount necessary to bring last eligible county to one dollar per capita).

At least 50% and all remaining funds in the annual appropriations for State Aid are distributed on a per capita basis to the eligible libraries. Eligibility is spelled out in Section 181.060. Currently 142 library districts are eligible and are receiving approximately 30 cents per capita which amounts to around 4% of their total annual operating expenses.

Since the State Aid is part of the agenda material, information on this has not been included in the documents.

STATE REIMBURSEMENT FOR LIBRARY SERVICE TO BLIND CITIZENS OF MISSOURI

Since 1963, this has been a payment after the fact to the St. Louis Public Library. When an audit is made of the service from the Wolfner Branch of the St. Louis Public Library, designated by the Library of Congress as a regional branch to serve the blind and physically handicapped of Missouri, the per capita cost for service to the blind are forwarded to the State Library for inclusion in the proposed annual budget to the Governor.

The last General Assembly amended this law to include service to the physically handicapped (those persons who because of a physical disability cannot handle conventional printed materials). The physically handicapped have been included in the Library of Congress Program since 1967. Reimbursement to the St. Louis Public Library for the physically handicapped service has been granted from the Federal Library Services and Construction Act Funds.

FEDERAL LIBRARY SERVICES AND CONSTRUCTION ACT FUNDS IN MISSOURI

The Library Services Act was amended to broaden the program in 1964. The green brochure, Ten Years of Library Progress, is an attempt to give an overall picture of how Missouri has administered the program during the past ten years. The Board has received copies of the Missouri Plan Under the Library Services and Construction Act which outlines the long-range goals for library development in Missouri with criteria, projected uses and priorities for using federal money in accomplishing these goals. Attempts have been made to use these funds to encourage and develop programs which will have lasting value in terms of library service to the citizens of Missouri and which can be maintained with local funding once the program has been established.

The green brochure gives a picture of these expenditures in broad terms. Other materials attempt to give more specific information on each broad program.

STRENGTHENING THE STATE LIBRARY

An effort has been made to keep federal expenditures at the State level within 40% of the total State Library budget. The decision relates to the principle of establishing with federal money only those programs which can be maintained when they contribute to the overall goals and to keep free as much funding as possible which can be made available to local libraries through grants to promote local public library development.

Federal funds at the State Library have been used to supplement overall operations with special emphasis on developing the material holdings (books, periodicals and microfilm) and in developing special programs such as inter-library loan, service to institutions, and children's services.

RESEARCH STUDIES

These are outlined in the accompanying documents with amounts of each study. Three of the studies on the list, #2, #5, and #6, were cooperative studies with other states. Each has made a contribution to the present program plans and goals. Documents on several of these studies are available

SCHOLARSHIPS AND INTERNSHIPS

This program has been administered through what is now the Library Resources Program. The documents cover this program since its beginning in 1958. The scholarships are outright grants to cover the fifth year Master's degree program in an ALA Accredited Library School.

To date, 148 scholarships have been granted. None were granted in fiscal year '74. Four of the 148 are still in library school. Seventy-seven of the 148 are now employed in Missouri libraries. The map gives an indication of the influence of this program in the State.

The internships are granted to college Sophomores or Juniors for ten weeks work in selected public libraries in Missouri. The intent of this program is to give those selected an opportunity to learn about a professional library career by working with qualified librarians.

To date, 130 internships have been granted. At present 36% of this total have attended or are attending library school.

An additional program from these funds is a Fellowship program giving Missouri public librarians with fifth year degrees an opportunity to attend workshops, institutes or other forms of continuing education. These are funded from repayments from scholarship students who fail to complete their two-year commitment to the State.

IN-SERVICE TRAINING

The Missouri library community recognized early the need for staff development if the libraries of the State were to accomplish the goals of quality library service to the citizens.

As shown in the chart, 2.7% of the federal funds have been expended in this ten year period to further the education of library personnel.

This program has included workshops and institutes from one day to one or two weeks for all personnel working in public libraries as well as for trustees. These have been held both statewide and in smaller areas of the State. The aim has been not only to introduce new staff members to library science but to bring to the degreed librarians and the trustees ideas and concerns related to current and future problems of society.

Many of these programs have been held on college campuses--some with the School of Library and Information Science at the University of Missouri, Columbia--others in disciplines related to special institutions such as Linda Hall Library in Kansas City.

Evaluations from the library community have indicated this to be one of the most successful programs in reaching a broad group of people and having lasting long-range results.

It has been possible to fund not only the program itself but the expenses of those attending. In fact, seventy-five to eighty per cent of these funds have been expended for the expenses of those attending.

From time to time only the programs have been funded. The response has been good but often the libraries have expressed the opinion that tight budgets allow only so much for staff expenses and a hardship is created when they must pay expenses. The general opinion expressed has been that such programs should be continued even if expenses for those attending must be met from local budgets.

GRANTS TO LIBRARY "SYSTEMS" AND FEDERATIONS

Because cooperative efforts have appeared to be a sound method of bringing to the people a broader and stronger library program, such efforts in various forms have had high priority in the granting of federal funds.

In the early days of the Library Services and Construction Act, these were often first steps in bringing together libraries in an area so they might begin to plan and work together.

The names on the sheet in the documents represent a center or a core library but the grants were based on proposals to benefit an area of the State.

In most of these areas some form of cooperation has continued after the termination of the funding. In some areas the cooperative efforts have expanded to include other libraries and in a few areas some cooperative local funding is now maintaining a continued cooperative effort.

In most cases the grants have funded personnel, materials, equipment and in every case some in-service training.

MAJOR RESOURCE GRANTS

Certain libraries, because of their location and because of their years of existence, have built collections which, both in quality and quantity, far exceed any collection that might be developed today. The four libraries listed as major resources fall into this category.

Funds have been granted to these libraries so that they might both continue to build on their existing collections and also maintain the basic in-depth collections which exist. As was pointed out in describing the interlibrary loan program, these four libraries are connected by teletype to the Missouri State Library and serve a major role in meeting the library needs of citizens from throughout Missouri.

PROCESSING CENTERS

Two independent self-sustaining processing centers exist in Missouri. These are cooperative efforts by member libraries to order and process books in an efficient and economical method. In 1966, the Library Services Center of Missouri, located in Jefferson City, asked the State Library to take over the management of that program while they continued to operate as a cooperative with a membership board to set policy.

The funds on the chart represent mainly the salary of the manager with the membership continuing to keep the remaining costs on a paying basis.

A long-range goal is to give these smaller libraries access in time to new technology which, because of their size, would not be possible if they were operating independently.

GRANTS TO LOCAL LIBRARIES

Proposals from local libraries have related to library development programs resulting in library mergers and the development of new and expanded programs of service. Usually the money was for the purchase of materials and equipment.

Because of a felt need for additional professional specialized services in the public libraries, grants limited to three years were made for the employment of additional professional staff if the library could indicate a method of continuing such staff at the end of the grant period. The years 1969-1973 indicate such grants to those libraries listed.

When the Library Services and Construction Act funding appeared to be in real trouble in 1973, this program was discontinued. It did not seem wise to employ staff on such a tenuous basis. With one exception, the libraries have been able to keep the staff and continue to expand the programs.

Currently proposals are received from local libraries for materials grants and library development grants.

SERVICE TO AGED AND DISADVANTAGED

A top priority in the Federal Library Services and Construction Act Program has been service to the disadvantaged and older Americans.

The St. Louis Public Library began such a pilot program with a federal grant in 1967. This program, after three years, has been supported with local funds and other programs have been proposed and funded to reach new target groups.

The Right to Read Program was an effort to reach those who were functionally illiterate. This two-year grant program is now funded by the St. Louis Public Library. Over a period of years Kansas City Public Library has proposed special programs to reach the pockets of minority groups and disadvantaged. Although each year new proposals for reaching specific groups are funded, many of the earlier programs are now being continued with local funds.

The Columbia Mobile Children's Unit is a unique effort to take a total library program to children in the less advantaged areas of a three county library district. The unit is equipped for audio-visual use, individual activities, story hours and the more traditional library activities for children. It has been made available to other libraries in the area for demonstration purposes. A secondary use has been adult basic education programs throughout the three-county area.

This was a one-time grant for the purchase and equipping of the van. Staff and the operation have, from the beginning, been funded from local sources.

SERVICE TO INSTITUTIONS

This grant program has been handled by what is now Development of Special Library Services. Since 1969, grants have been made to State supported institutions (hospitals and correction facilities) for the purpose of developing and improving library services to the persons who are institutionalized.

This modest program has brought library services to many persons who have not had it before.

Grants have been made to the institutions on the basis of annual proposals. Each institution has accepted the responsibility for a facility -- a room or building for library services -- and a person who is responsible for the service. The institutions in each case have used local budget funds to maintain and build the collections.

MISSOURI FILM-CASSETTE COOPERATIVES

The Missouri Libraries Film Cooperative was begun in 1948 with a Carnegie Grant for the initial film purchases. The purpose of the original grant was to test the effectiveness of circuit distribution of film, as an alternative to spot booking of film from a central collection.

The 35 public library members serve a combined population of over a million and one-half, representing at least 34% of the people served by public libraries.

Grants in the amount of $424,647 over a seven-year period have been made to provide funds to build the basic spot booking collection. The Cooperative now owns approximately 2,500 films which are available through the member libraries to groups and organizations for showing without charge. The Cooperative is financially self-sustaining in its operation and maintenance of the collection.

The Cassette Cooperative represents a group of public libraries organized on a basis similar to the Missouri Libraries Film Cooperative for the purpose of acquiring and making available audio-cassettes to the citizens of Missouri through the local public libraries.

The one-time grant to this group was made for the purchase of the basic collection and duplicating equipment. This is planned and organized to be financially self-sustaining. Approximately twenty libraries are members of this Cooperative.

CONSTRUCTION GRANTS

These grants have been made within the guidelines of the Library Services and Construction Act.

Until the current year, it has been possible to fund all eligible proposals.

The unavailability of local matching funds have deterred many libraries in actually moving into a building program.

As can be seen from the chart, over eleven million dollars has been spent on public library buildings under this program in the ten-year period, with sixty-nine percent of the financing representing local funding.

With federal funding the Missouri State Library has utilized the services of a qualified architect to work with these projects and to monitor federal requirements related to them.

STATUS OF FEDERAL FUNDS FOR THE STATE LIBRARY
LIBRARY SERVICES AND CONSTRUCTION ACT

ALL FEDERAL FUNDS ALLOCATED TO THE STATES UNDER THIS PROGRAM DURING FISCAL YEAR 1974 ARE GUARANTEED AVAILABLE TO THE STATES DURING FISCAL YEAR 1975 BY A SO-CALLED TYDINGS AMENDMENT PASSED BY THE CONGRESS. (Impounded 1973 funds were not released until 1974.)

AT THE PRESENT TIME---AUGUST 30---THE FOLLOWING FUNDS ARE AVAILABLE TO MISSOURI. ESTIMATES ARE INCLUDED OF FUNDS AVAILABLE UNDER TERMS OF A CONTINUING RESOLUTION OF THE CONGRESS.

TITLE I----LIBRARY SERVICES:

Funds carried over from Fiscal Years 1973 and 1974	$1,229,123
Funds expected for Fiscal Year 1975 (no appropriation as yet)	500,000
TOTAL	1,729,123

TITLE II----CONSTRUCTION

Funds carried over from Fiscal Year 1973	$320,527
--	-----------

(No construction funds were appropriated for Fiscal Year 1974;
no construction funds have been requested in the Executive Budget for Fiscal 1975)

TITLE III----INTERLIBRARY COOPERTATION:

Funds carried over from Fiscal Years 1973 and 1974	$181,545
Funds expected for Fiscal Year 1975 (no appropriation as yet)	50,000
	231,545

Note: the very large carry-over of funds is the result of impoundments of funds for Fiscal 1973 released in 1974, and the very late release of appropriations for Fiscal 1974.

SOME PROBLEMS WHICH TODAY FACE THE STATE LIBRARY

1. There are a great many libraries in the State which are not "public" libraries. Many of these are supported by the same taxpayers who finance the public libraries. Ways must be found to develop better and stronger relationships with these other kinds of libraries and to make them parts of a Statewide library network.
2. Because the creation of public libraries in Missouri is a matter of local choice, there are areas in the State today where public library service does not exist, despite a strong desire for it by at least a minority of the local population.
3. There is great inequality among the public libraries of the State. Many small city libraries are totally inadequate to serve the reading needs of a twentieth century population.
4. Many local libraries, their administration, and perhaps their clientele seem unwilling, unmotivated to seek improved ways of providing services. Some of the services offered to them by the State Library may not be desired by them and may seem almost useless.
5. Because of the inequality of wealth in the State, and because of the difference in motivation among library trustees and librarians, already prosperous and even wealthy libraries grow "richer" while inadequate libraries stagnate.
6. Various legal barriers exist which prohibit access to and use of library services by individuals who need such services very much.
7. The "image" of libraries as designed for only a certain kind of person, i.e., the student or the "literary" adult must be overcome. The value of information to every man must be demonstrated more effectively.
